From The President

Veteran Superintendent: "Opportunity Great"

"We are men and women of destiny with a greater opportunity today than ever in history." These words were among the key statements in a message, "The Dynamics of Destiny," brought by the Reverend N.D. Davidson, veteran District Superintendent of the Oregon District of the Assemblies of God, as he spoke to the faculty and students at Northwest College. The occasion was the College's annual Superintendents' Week, January 29-31.

A veteran pastor and leader in district and national government in the Assemblies of God fellowship for some 40 years, the popular district superintendent stands as tall in the eneration of his district pastors and people of his district as he does in physical stature.

As he expressed his outlook on the future of the Assemblies of God, he did so with optimism and enthusiasm and with counsel rooted in the values that brought success in the past. He pointed to the resources of the Holy Spirit, of personal beliefs, and of personal values, decision and action.

The personable superintendent, renowned for his rapport with young people, found a ready response from his collegiate hearers. During the week he was the featured pulpit guest and doubled as special lecturer in some of the pastoral classes, besides giving time and attention to the work of the College Board of Directors of which he is vice-chairman.

Dr. Cho Delivers Fiery Missionary Messages at NC

Culture Shock in Reverse?

Americans learn from a product of the mission field? A reversal of role between teacher and student? These were questions that obviously made their impact upon students and faculty at Northwest College during the College's Winter Quarter Missionary Emphasis Week. The guest speaker was a slender, personable and youthful-looking Korean pastor who ministered from the chapel pulpit under an anointing of the Holy Spirit. His fiery messages enlightened the understanding, challenged the mind, edified the spirit and moved the will. The speaker was the Reverend Dr. Cho Yonggi, pastor of one of the world's largest Protestant congregations—the 25,000 member Seoul Revival Center.

Pastor Cho, whose messages were illuminated by his extensive experience as one of the Orient's most notable preachers of the Gospel, demonstrated an aptitude and skill in Biblical exegesis that would rival the most renowned of Bible teachers and pulpiteres in the English-speaking world. Yet that is not what he came to America to do. He said he came to pay a debt of gratitude to America for its investment in missions, an investment which changed the course and destiny of his own life. Through him, many thousands of persons have had the opportunity to hear the Gospel in Korea and throughout the Orient.

Dr. Cho challenged the students at the college with the vastness of the task of evangelization of the Orient where sixty percent of the world's population live and only two percent of its Christians live.

Few spiritual emphasis weeks have brought to the campus as many visitors. Summarizing his observations, College President, Dr. D.V. Hurst said:

"It was a great personal privilege for me to bring Dr. Cho to Northwest College and to present him to our students. His ministry will have a lifelong impact on them. His preaching inspired faith! The way in which he tied the phenomenal growth of his church to the opening of the Word of God to his own soul couldn't help but challenge the students' hearts. It was obvious that the revelation of God's Word to his heart, the prayer life of the Christians there, and the commitment to Christ of all involved in the church formed a solid foundation for the growth of the church and same would produce similar results elsewhere."

In the final morning chapel service, the students "adopted" him as one of them and President Hurst presented him with an appropriate certificate citing him as an Honorary Alumnus of Northwest College. In response, Dr. Cho said, "I love Northwest and I love its students!" And it was obvious that he did!

Kate Collins: "Following Her Children's Footsteps"

The return of adults back to school is finding expression at Northwest College together with other colleges throughout the country. One of the unique examples is exemplified in Mrs. Kate Collins who said that she is "following the steps of her four children to Northwest College," all of whom came to Northwest for their college training. Here each of her children met their marriage companions, thus doubling Mrs. Collins' family ties with the College.

Originating from Texas, Mrs. Collins spent her early life in Texas and New Mexico, then moved to Winlock, Washington where her husband was a logging engineer working with road equipment. After his death in 1965, Mrs. Collins began her college career, taking courses at Fort Steilacoom Community College in Tacoma where she lives today. She said she gets up at 5:45 each morning to drive from Tacoma to Northwest College in Kirkland.

Mrs. Collins' track record through the accomplishments of her family is somewhat unique in itself. Three of her children are ministers, one of whom is on the mission field in the South Pacific. Her family includes Reverend and Mrs. Ray Alcorn, pastors at the First Assembly of God Church in Sandy, Oregon; Mr. and Mrs. David Selig, assistants at the Queen Anne Assembly of God in Seattle; Reverend and Mrs. Raymond Sparre, missionaries in the Marshall Islands in the South Pacific; and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wilson of Pasadena, California. Mr. Wilson, a former student at the College is in the advertising business, which services a number of Christian broadcasting enterprises including the well-known Airmail From God program radio and telecasts which Ray directs.

Said College President, Dr. D. V. Hurst, "We congratulate this remarkable woman of faith, for her courage and adventuresome spirit, and invite many more like her to find their way back to the campus."

Lilly Grant Assists Conferences

Dr. Paul A. Kienel

Early Childhood Education

We are witnessing the "end of the marriage" between the public schools and the American public, according to Dr. Paul A. Kienel, executive-director of the California Association of Christian Schools. Dr. Kienel cited news articles concerning teacher strike threats and levy failures as evidence of his opinions, and attributed the growing public disenchantment with the public schools to the latter's disregard of parental wishes for the perpetuation of traditional values in the education of their children. This, he feels, has created a good opportunity for childhood education with a Christian basis.

These comments were made by Dr. Kienel as he addressed the seventy registrants at Northwest College's first Early Childhood Education Conference in the college's Learning Center on February 1. Pastors, ministers of Christian education, and workers in day care and pre-school programs were among those attending the conference. They responded with enthusiasm to Dr. Kienel and the other workshop leaders, who included Dr. Bonnie Dreves, instructor in early childhood education at Seattle University and ECE consultant to the Archdiocese of Seattle; Mr. William Barr, consultant to the Northwest District of the Assemblies of God for pre-school installations; Rev. and Mrs. Allan Hulten, Ministers of Christian Education at Evergreen Christian Center in Olympia, Washington; and Miss Shirley Newton, early childhood education instructor at Northwest College.

The conference was conducted in cooperation with the Christian education department of Northwest District of the Assemblies of God. A second conference with the same program will be conducted on February 15 in cooperation with the Oregon District of the Assemblies of God. Location of the conference will be the Tigard Assembly of God, 11265 S.W. Gaarde, Tigard, Oregon. Both conferences were made possible by a grant from the Lilly Foundation.

NC Alumnus Honored: A Perspective on Evangelism

A former NC student, Robert C. Bateman, was honored by Linda Vista Baptist Bible College and seminary at its mid-year commencement in December. Dr. Bateman, who attended Northwest College during the academic year 1949-50, has for some years been the Executive Director for the World Military Missions Crusade, headquartered in San Diego, California.

The outreach of the Crusade has been eminently successful in bringing the Gospel to more than 100,000 military personnel in over 55 nations. Under the leadership of Dr. Bateman, the Crusade's outreach was extended to Korea and Taiwan where centers have been opened to evangelize the military of these lands on their home soil.

He revealed that early in 1975 the Crusade will be launching a new and expanded overseas outreach in Korea and Taiwan—an outreach made possible by a level of confidence Dr. Bateman holds amongst some of the highest placed leaders in government and military in these countries.

Dr. Bateman has employed his wife's experience in Gospel broadcasting by radio and television, and has done extensive writing. Some of his articles have been published in the well-known BIOLA monthly, The King's Business.

Northwest College President, Dr. D.V. Hurst, noted that this kind of outreach and productivity in evangelism fulfills the highest purpose of the College in its investment in the training of its former students and graduates.

College Has Record Winter Enrollment

A record number of winter quarter students is enrolled at Northwest College in Kirkland, the office of the Registrar announced today. Total enrollment for the quarter stands at 540 students taking work for college credit plus six non-matriculated auditors. This figure represents six percent increase over the enrollment one year ago. The previous record for the winter quarter was experienced in 1969 when 528 students were enrolled.

The enrollment figure exceeded the college's projections by about one percent.

Included in the count are approximately sixty new students who joined returning students for the winter quarter.

With Eagle boosters like seven-year old Brent Johnson in the bleachers, it is not surprising that the NC Eagles basketball team ran away with a 72-61 victory over Multnomah School of the Bible in their January 24 contest at Northwest Pavilion in Kirkland. Brent is the son of Leroy Johnson, Professor of History and Assistant Coach for the Eagles.
