Northwest University students dazzled Friday night in their suits and dresses at Seattle's Pacific Science Center for Evening

Evening is an annual formal put on by NUSG every spring for NU students. This year NUSG Activities Chair, Taylor Ann Richards and event coordinators Charnie Dondrea, Moriah Miller and Irma Celeste Montes planned and organized the night's events.

Students who purchased dinner tickets arrived between 6-8pm to eat before wandering off to the multitude of exhibits offered. The laser dome was a major attraction of the night with showings of classic hits by the Beatles and Michael Jackson.

Two photo booths were open to students to take dozens of photos with their dates and friends throughout the night. Students received prints immediately and were able to use the provided video screens to send the pictures to themselves through a variety of ways, including text and email.

Other exhibits such as the planetarium, tropical butterfly house, insect village, saltwater tide pool, body works, Wellbody's Academy of Health & Wellness and Pompeii were also available for students to enjoy throughout the night.
