While attending Northwest College, I remember... discovering how truly difficult it was to apply information from Professor Hobson's Wisdom Literature class to daily existence on the 500 floor. That wonderful group of "boys" on the soccer team who taught me how to have fun and be competitive at the same time. Chipping in to buy Norm Schultz some tennis shoes. Feeling the Presence of God in class. And finally, learning that "library study" was an oxymoron.

Since college days I have... struggled in my faith but matured eventually. Travelled overseas; lived in Israel for a year (maps) whereby I met a beautiful brunette from North Carolina who said "yes". I've gained too much weight, but not enough that I can't hide it by pulling out my shirt. I have three beautiful baby girls who fight for my two legs when I come home from work. I am presently a Director of a specialized sexual aggression treatment facility for juvenile offenders. And finally I've heard that the latest word from God is found in the Bible.
