From the President...

"TO THE FACULTY"

When one sets foot on the campus of Northwest College he is immediately impressed with the beauty of its terrain and landscaping, and the grandeur of the tall fir trees. He quickly gets a sense of the future development possibilities the campus presents.

D. V. Hurst

But then his eyes turn to the buildings—colorful, clean and modern. Twelve new buildings in less than ten years! And, he gets a sense of growth and divine blessing.

Then he tours the buildings—resident halls, classrooms, chapel, library—and asks himself, "But what makes this?"

After careful thought he concludes, "It's the people who work here, faculty—men and women who are trained, yes, but who love God and who are committed to His purpose."

And, he is right!

Above all else physical and human, the faculty makes Northwest College what it is. It's the faculty who construct and teach the courses and lessons, who, under God, frame the experiences young people have at Northwest College.

Things don't just happen! Young people don't just happen through a college education. Someone dreams for them, plans for them and carries through for them. (Perhaps this is what today's "loose" generation seeking new happenings has not yet learned.) Before they arrived someone preceded and prepared. After they left someone carried through. Who? The Faculty!

As we look ahead to another school year we know much attention will be given the new student body—and it should. But let's pause to salute the dedicated faculty, to thank God for their labor of love and to pray for them requesting sustaining grace and strength of Spirit.

For while the stately fir stands tall on the campus of Northwest College and points students skyward, the faculty stands taller and points them Godward!
