THE NORTHWESTERN

NORTHWEST COLLEGE • ASSEMBLIES OF GOD • KIRKLAND, WASHINGTON

LOOKING AHEAD

- March 31 – Christian Ed. Workshop with Rev. Rodney Toews.
- April 3 – Campus Day
- April 10 – Lay Council
- June 8-12 – Creationism Institute

Northwest College is a missionary school. It is a vital arm of today's missionary movement. The principle that evangelist Crowder taught in chapel, "You will never be a missionary sometime until you are a missionary now!" is true. N.C. is a place where opportunities for practical application of this truth is provided. N.C. is missions!!

Dr. D.V. Hurst

From The President

A PLACE... A TIME... TO PRAY

I've been impressed this year about N.C.—a place to pray—and N.C. a time to pray.

As the year opened we were in deep need of a breakthrough so that we could commence construction on the new residence hall. We desperately need it. I wrote to all our friends asking them to pray. We've had a breakthrough; we have started building. And it will be ready by September 1981. But I believe we will see an even greater breakthrough on the financing!

No letter I have written about N.C. has seen the response that letter brought. We didn't ask for money, we asked for prayer. But many sent dollars and said they were praying. Others wrote of their concern and pledged to pray.

We know they are! We feel it!

Let's keep it up! And more earnestly' "The effectual fervent prayer" breaks through.

Also early in the year I received a copy of a memorandum from student John Young, leader of the Campus MIG (Ministry Interest Group) to all faculty and staff regarding "Secret Prayer" saying:

"This is to inform you that the Student Leadership of this campus feels the burden in their heart to uplift you daily in prayer. Each student leader has been assigned a name of a faculty member, part-time faculty, or staff member and will be praying for that person daily. This will be done for you throughout the year. You will find out at the end of the year who it was who was praying for you."

Early in the winter quarter alumnus Linfield Crowder joined us for a week of Missions Emphasis. He brought a Spirit of prayer. Night after night students stayed late at the altar of prayer. We saw a good move of God!

Linfield preached prayer—prayed prayer and urged prayer. He said: "I'm jealous over the altar, I'll do anything to get you to give God time to do His work in your life." Again he said: "Give me a young man or a young women who will hit the altar, climb the hill and pick up his or her cross and die! One cross can save the world." Still again he said: "A long time ago my heart moved from the pulpit to the altar. Jesus said, 'My house shall be called a house of prayer'."

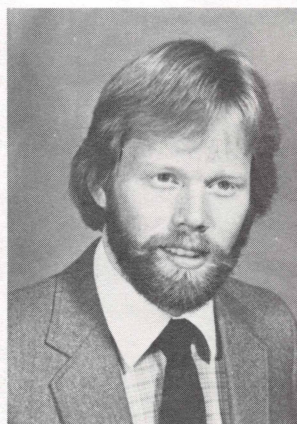

And just recently there was a full page report on N.C. in our East Side paper, The Journal American. In one of the articles, covering a third page and quoting one student, Willy Miller, was captioned—"Students don't hesitate to pray in the halls!"

So we've seen a great prayer emphasis and are seeing it. Pray with us that this will continue and grow at N.C. We want the Spirit of supplication . . . the old time sights and sounds of young people at the altar praying and learning to pray to be everywhere evident at N.C.

What greater experience?!

What greater learning?!

What greater life, can there be?!

"During our 1981 fall quarter the Associated Student Body Executive Council discussed the Spiritual life of our students.

As leaders we felt a need to start a prayer meeting at 6:30 a.m. every Monday for one hour. Anywhere from 20 to 50 students have joined us in prayer and fasting for students, faculty, maintenance, and administration members.

If you have any needs or requests you would like us to remember, we would love to hear from you."

Sincerely,

Jim Duncan

A.S.B. President

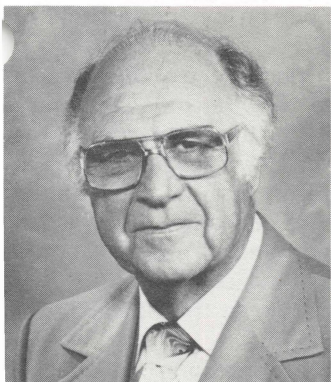

A prayer and praise time during winter quarter Spiritual Emphasis week. Many students came to the chapel during free hours to wait on the Lord for the service.

ADMINISTRATOR FEATURE: Crowder and Fletcher

Crowder

Fletcher

Unlike other members of the N.C. administration, H.W. ("Herb") Crowder and Woodrow J. ("Woody") Fletcher spend most of their time away from the campus. As the College's Director of Development and Stewardship Consultant, respectively, their primary job is to build good will and support for Northwest College by serving its publics as financial counselors and consultants. Churches, pastors, districts, and missions programs of the Northwest region have been greatly helped through the ministry of these men—as the standing ovations they sometimes receive testify.

A 5-foot 8-inch tall Irishman born and reared in Canada, Woody Fletcher brings a varied background to his work. He trained pilots for the RCAF during World War II, then returned home to earn his diploma at Western Bible College in Winnipeg. Subsequently, he served churches in several Canadian provinces and in the States of Massachusetts and Washington as pastor, but also worked as a licensed life insurance and investment broker, and for sixteen years as an investment counselor. Out of this vast experience, he is now able to counsel pastors and laymen about their axes and personal finances.

Herb Crowder has served Northwest College for more than twenty-six years—as Assistant to the President, Public Relations Director, Business Manager, and Director of Development. From those "early days" he recalls his negotiations for the present N.C. campus, feverish efforts to raise the faculty payroll in only three days, and the many miracles encountered in purchasing necessary items to equip the newly-acquired campus. He is happy that he can work on deferred giving instead of crisis money raising.

Herb's training for his present job included work at J.C., the University of Omaha, and a diploma from LaSalle Extension University. His experience includes ten years as salesman, sales manager, and manager in business, plus eighteen years of pastoring Washington churches. He entered service with Northwest College with a sense of divine mission which goes back to his childhood, when his mother gave him to God in prayer. His present happiness in the work derives from knowing he does God's work.

Woody and Herb have some things in common—such as their mutual love of golfing and their weariness with motels and restaurants. But more importantly they agree that Christians are stewards of all God has given them and would see that God gets the benefit of all their goods. If you don't agree, they would like to tell you a story!

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION GIFTS

Are you looking for an idea? Consider a scholarship gift to a graduate senior who is coming to Northwest College. This would be a most appreciated gift to a high school graduate.

Although the gift would not be a tax-deductible item for the giver, it would be a very practical and most meaningful gift.

If you would like information about this possibility, contact the Financial Aid Department at Northwest College.

EVANGELIST CALLS FOR REVIVAL, MISSIONS

Like the voice of the Hebrew prophets echoing down the corridors of time . . . came the voice of Evangelist Linfield Crowder, N.C. alumnus, and three-time speaker at Northwest College's winter quarter Missionary Emphasis Week, January 12-16. Seldom has the pulpit of Northwest College reverberated with a more searching message and a more earnest call for surrender to God and to His service at home and abroad.

This week was the College's annual Missionary Emphasis week. It marked the third time that Evangelist Crowder has been the Spiritual Emphasis week speaker at the College—a record held by no other speaker throughout the nearly 30-year history of Spiritual Emphasis weeks at the College.

Evangelist Crowder, himself a graduate of N.C.'s class of 1953, spends considerable time on the mission field in the Pacific under the auspices of the Foreign Missions Department of the Assemblies of God.

Not only did Evangelist Crowder address the college community of students, faculty, and administration, but he was the guest speaker for a fellowship gathering of the Seattle Charismatic Pastors on the campus on the final day of the week.

The searching quality and power of his messages brought a response from the spiritually responsive students who filled the chapel consistently throughout the week. The Evangelist's call for commitment and his earnest prayers for revival on the campus of the College continue to burn as a sacred flame in the hearts of his hearers.

ICR SUMMER INSTITUTE

Northwest College will host a one-week Summer Institute on Scientific Creationism put on by the Institute of Scientific Creationism June 8-12.

Faculty for the Institute will include three of the top men in the field of Creation research. They include Dr. Henry M. Morris, well-known author, lecturer, Director of the Institute who is also President of Heritage College in San Diego; Dr. Richard B. Bliss, Director of Curriculum for the Institute and Professor of Science education at Christian Heritage College in San Diego; and Professor Harold Slusher, Assistant Professor of Physics and Director of Kidd Memorial Seismic Observatory at the University of Texas, El Paso.

The College's interest in scientific creationism is directly tied to its commitment to Biblical creationism in particular and to Biblical faith in general. The inroads of popular uncritical assumptions about the origins of the earth and of man are seen as concerns of the day especially as they affect the role of the pastor, the youth minister and others who must deal with questions of faith in relation to these questions. The impact of the work of the Institute on educational and political circles in the U.S. has come in for national attention.

The five-day concentrated institute will be scheduled for full-day sessions and will deal with such topics as "Creation and Evolution;" "The Origin of the Universe;" "The Modern Classroom;" "Thermodynamics, Entropy and Evolution;" "The Origin of the Solar System;" "The Origin of Life;" "The Geological Record;" "The Age of the Earth;" "Critique of Radiometric Dating" and other similar topics. The lectures will be augmented by two film presentations.

Information about the seminar may be secured from the Admissions office at the College.

1981 PLACEMENT PROFILES PUBLISHED

Senior class Placement Profiles have been published on the 1981 candidates for graduation.

The Profiles are brief resumes on each senior, including background data on his or her training, vocational and college internship experience together with personal and family data of interest to those involved in the placement process on the field.

Also included in the 25-page publication are photos of the majority of the seniors and contact information for the convenience of those desiring to get in touch with them.

The spectrum of preparation on the part of the graduates ranges from the fields of business and secretarial skills, to Christian Education, Counseling Ministries, Early Childhood Education, Sacred Music, Missions, Pastoral Studies, and Youth Ministries.

The Placement Profiles, which have been published by the College over the last ten years, have played a significant role in assisting graduates to find places of ministry and in helping pastors, churches, and other church-related organizations in finding qualified staff personnel.

Pastors are invited to contact the College Placement Coordinator to arrange for interviews with seniors on campus or to make contacts with them in other ways in the interests of locating staff and ministry personnel which they have in their churches and related church enterprises. Coordinating the placement program at the College is Dr. Amos D. Millard, Dean of Admissions and Registrar. Copies of the newly published Profiles will be sent upon request to the Placement Coordinator.

Interested persons are invited to contact Dr. Millard to schedule interviews with graduating students. All are urged to schedule early since most students are placed well before commencement.

COLLEGE HOSTS CHARISMATIC MINISTERS

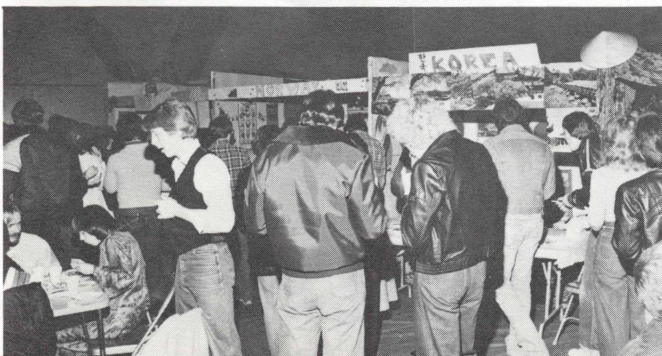

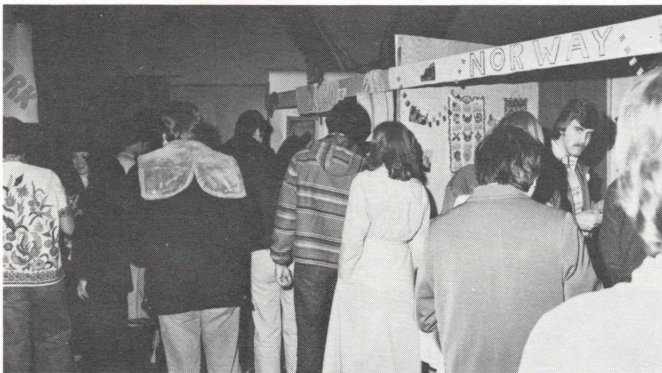

A high-point event bearing on the Northwest College's relationship with the Charismatic community of Seattle was its hosting of the Seattle pastor's fellowship on January 16th. The meeting, which started with the College's Spiritual Emphasis chapel service, brought out nearly fifty ministers from a broad assortment of church bodies ranging from Baptist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, Free Methodist to the traditional Pentecostal bodies.

Guest speaker for the occasion was the College's Spiritual Emphasis week evangelist, Linfield Crowder, who spoke to the ministers about recent church trends he has observed in his travels.

The attendance was said to be one of the Fellowship's larger gatherings in recent months. Hosting the meeting in behalf of the College, President D.V. Hurst indicated that the College would look forward to a return visit from the ministers in the future. A number of the College's graduates participate in the Fellowship. "Home base" for the Fellowship when they are not being hosted in other churches is Bethany Presbyterian Church in Seattle.

MISSIONS FAIR

NEW BOOTHS

Rev. Earl Cowley, pictured on the right, built new booths for the annual Mission's Food Fair. They are designed to be bolted together and therefore will be more permanent and available each year. Pictured with Rev. Cowley from the left are W.O.M. Chairman Randy Martin; John Young, Campus M.I.C. leader; and Ron Limbrick, Servicemen's M.I.G. leader.

This year's Mission's Food Fair was held the Saturday prior to the Missions Emphasis week in the winter quarter. Many booths are set up to represent countries around the world where students can sample food and have fellowship. This is followed by a devotional time.

STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Teachers at Northwest College recognize the potential of the written word to influence for good or evil and seek to encourage their students to develop their skills to write for publication. Recent reports from several sources indicate success.

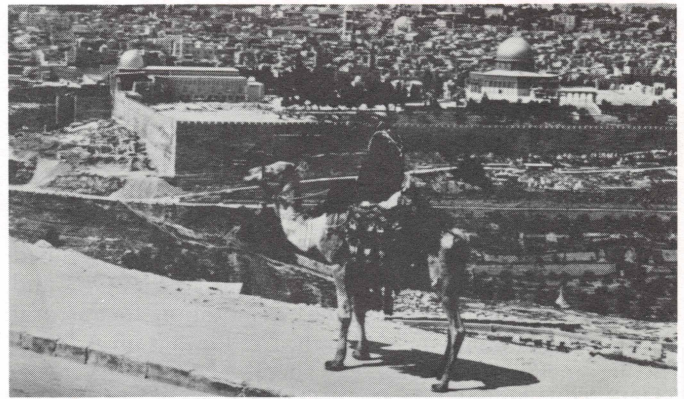

Professor Melvyn Ming recently submitted some outreach ideas, written by his students in youth ministries, to a periodical called The Youth Leader. One of these, an article by student Arne Dixon entitled, "Riot Night," appeared in the January issue, and others may be published later.

Twice this year Diana Hovis, a student in Mrs. Stewart's English class, has had poems accepted for publication in the national anthology, American Collegiate Poets. Their titles were "Father" and "Jeff."

Mrs. Olson, another of N.C.'s English teachers, hears that some of her former students are still writing as well. Judy Pearson Swanson has had two poems accepted for publication by Harbinger Press and has copyrighted a Readers Theatre script she wrote. Diana Savage Kruger is working on a book, and has already had several items published in Sunday school papers.

N.C.'s teachers feel that this is only the beginning. They applaud their students' success, expecting to see names of more and more students and former students in print as the years go by.

FLYING SEMINAR

"O, Jerusalem . . ." These famous words by Jesus were given from a spot near where this photo was taken. Today the modern city swallows up the area seen by our Lord when these words were uttered. Focal point of the old city is the rectangular open area which houses the domes known as the Temple Mount.

Dates for the 1982 Flying Seminar to the Holy Land are tentatively set for March 8-21. Announcements and new bulletins on tour plans will be sent to all who desire to be put on the College's Flying Seminar mailing list.

CAMPUS DAY

April 3, 1981

We are ready!!! Bring your young people. High school juniors and seniors are what it is all about. Let them visit classes, talk to faculty, attend information seminars, hear the choirs and music groups, watch men's and women's basketball, and much much more.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN D-CAP

Rev. Bob Cook, D-CAP from the Rocky Mountain district was a recent chapel guest. He is being presented to the student body by Public Relations Director Bob Griffin, on the left. Rev. Cook brought a timely message and related beautifully to the students. He spoke in one of Professor Ming's Youth Ministries classes and was available for interviews with students interested in ministering in the Rocky Mountain district.

Alumni News

HOW 'BOUT THAT?!

Isn't it noteworthy that nearly one-half of Oregon District's foreign missionaries are N.C. grads? Count 'em for yourself!

DORIS OLSON (faculty) and husband, Henning, are now occupying their newly-built home at 8415-8th Ave. N.E. (Seattle). DR. CALVIN JONES (Baltimore, MD) had first book published, THE PASTORAL MENTOR, and now working on a second one. In addition to Pastoral duties and building a new church, Dr. Jones is an Adjunct Faculty member of Drew U. Theol. School. REV. ARTHUR TOWNSEND (Wainwright, Alberta, Canada) was published in 1980 in 20 Inspirational magazines and 44 articles printed throughout Canada, U.S. & Britain. PASTOR & MRS. MAYNARD OSS, of Full Gospel Fellowship, Ferndale, Wash., recently celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary. Also marking 40 years of ministry for the Oss'. DIANE PETERS (Portland, OR) is back form 2 years in Barcelona, Spain on a MAPS assignment and will return this year to again work with the Joe Wead family after their furlough. She was doing secretarial & children's work. RUTH ZUVELA (Everett, WA) is back from MAPS assignment at Euskirchen, Germany, in evangelism and literature distribution. DAVE & CHRIS CHRISTIANSEN are new pastors at Calvary Chapel in Pt. Townsend, Washington. EVA RADANOVSKY (in Spokane) on furlough wrote: "January marks the halfway mark of the galley proof readings for the Moore Bible. I am glad as there is eager anticipation of it on the field (W. Africa)." RICHARD MICHALSKI and wife, SARA, have spent many years in active ministry in Eastern Europe and in Communist countries. Richard's parents, as well as his wife's, were born behind the Iron Curtain but escaped to freedom. KEN & LINDA BENINTENDI and daughter, Melody (on furlough from Taiwan) have been missionaries for 10 years directing ICI ministry. BILL & SHARON JOHNSTON & 3 children have just completed first term of service in Ghana, W. Africa: taught at Northern Ghana Bible Institute, established new works and supervised two medical clinics. MIKE HOPSON (Point Hope, AK) writes: "I've been Asst. Pastor here 2 years. Possibly a couple of students from this area may be interested in attending N.C. So send some application forms please."
