FROM THE PRESIDENT

BACK TO SCHOOL

"Back to School" are words filled with excitement. They mean classes, books, term papers, study and tests. Without these, the essential ingredients, there is no such thing as school.

But they lead to learning. And that's what's exciting!

Watch a small child as he seeks to understand. Listen to a boy with his endless string of questions — "What? How? Where? Why?" Just when one thinks he's finished and all have been answered, he starts all over again.

Why? (Let's ask one, too). Well, deep within him is a drive, a drive called curiosity. He wants to know! And the drive to know says, "Ask questions. Learn!" And that's what makes learning exciting. It satisfies!

Now, God works with — not against — this drive. He caused His Word to be written, "for our learning." He sent the Holy Spirit, "to guide into all truth." He provided the perfect example in His Son of One who learned and grew in understanding and wisdom. He framed the ministry of teaching and gave instructions concerning how it should be done. He even classed the teacher along with the other ministry gifts and identified those who did as a special gift from His Son to the church for which an immeasurable price was paid.

But it's not just learning that counts, it's learning the truth that is of ultimate concern. What is right? What has worth? What can be said without contradictions? What is at the bottom of things? Where did man come from? Why does he exist here? What is his destiny? How and by what standard can he live a good life? The best of life?

On and on the questions come! There can be only one answer to them all and that's the source of life, Himself!

Christ is the Answer!

Now, that's what makes Northwest College of such worth. At the center of all learning — exciting learning — that takes place in its halls is Jesus Christ. To know Him is to know truth, to be set free, — free from ignorance, from the plague of unanswered questions, from the haunting fear that life's source and destiny as well as reason for being are all unexplained. To know Him is to know meaning and meaning leads to worth.

To appreciate this, one needs but to read of the groping of a secular system that looks for values, ethics, meaning and direction in a purely humanistic and relativistic scheme. It just is not there so will not be found!

Almost every day I see evidence of these gropings in the press. I read of "value education," of raising "ethical children" in a "dog-eat-dog world of 1982." The "best" offer of answer given is "a humanistic — flexible sense of ethics." I read of "hero models" and superstars who fail to exemplify the "moral and ethical consensus" on which a society that will endure must be built. The lament is repeated over and over. And it will be when a Christian society forsakes its mooring and seeks to establish a "new reality."

Some time ago I read this line: "I don't have to know all the answers, but I desperately need to know that the answers exist and where they can be found." Now, that's what real learning is all about. And that's why God has spoken through His Son — "The more sure word . . . !" And, again I say, that's what makes an education received at N.C. of such value!

N.C. is built on the rock and that rock is Jesus Christ. This foundation cannot be shaken. It is unchangeable. It can never be destroyed. Those who study in N.C.'s halls find truth, find eternal values, find ethics with divine source. They find answers to their questions about life — its beginnings, its purpose and its destiny.

Such learning is satisfying. Exciting! Such learning is foundation for building a life with meaning and purpose.

This is why I'm excited about what is happening today at N.C. Hundreds of Christian youth from the Northwest, across the country and around the world are enrolling at N.C. as I write these lines. I know what's in store for them and what it will do for them.

It's not just "back to school" at N.C. with classes, books, term papers, study and tests — exciting as this may be. But it's back to a search for and discovering truth. Back to eternal values and ethics. Back to pursuit of the knowledge of Him "who filleth all in all!"

It's back to eternal reality and life and hope in Jesus Christ.

BACK HOME . . .

I THINK IT'S RAINING

We're back to two toothbrushes again. We started that way 29 years ago. Two little girls and one small boy made five. Five and holding — we thought it would never end.

All too soon the girls said goodbye, and today the little boy, now a man, packed his toothbrush and went away.

It's enough to make a grown man weep — but men don't cry.
And dogs don't bark,

Birds don't fly,

Bees don't sting,

The sun doesn't rise —

And it doesn't rain in Indianapolis in the summertime.

Months of study and prayer led to the choice of Northwest College. Admission was sought and granted, forms exchanged, deposits made, books purchased, supplies sent ahead.

The departure itself was a matter of some concern. There would be other days and other struggles, but this one must be handled with dignity and control. Control is the key.

Park the car and check the bags. Ride the escalator and turn left. Look honest as you pass Security, and follow the blue concourse to Gate 19. Seat assignment: 9-F in non-smoking.

Soon it's time to do what in my mind I have rehearsed a hundred times. Once you start — like peddling a bicycle — you can't stop. The plan must be as artfully executed as it has been carefully crafted. No hitches. Ready?

I walk over to my boy, kiss his cheek and pat his face; our eyes don't meet. (I have to reach to kiss him, but I don't mind.)

George MacDonald said, "There is nothing as sad as the sight of a man's back."

This man is tall and slender (not thin, please), with olive jacket, tan cords and brown shoes. He grips attache case and garment bag, shows his ticket and walks away; he doesn't look back.

We are left to chew gum furiously, pace nervously and race from one window to another — and don't forget the old lip-biting trick.

The door closes, steps disappear, baggage cars whiz away, engines start and the jet moves. It will taxi south, turn around, stop and wait for clearance: "Fasten your seat belts, please." Rev those engines.

Here it comes! Boeing 727, white with blue and aqua trim and an eagle painted on it. Strong wings; now lifting —

It will pierce grey clouds and reach for blue skies, bearing the young man who is going West. In four hours and seven minutes Republic Flight 614 will touch down at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport.

The sky was overcast when we left home this morning. With overnight temperatures in the 40's the air was crisp, but we hardly noticed. Speeding toward Mitchell Field, we were dealing with internal conditions; "mixed emotions" — they call them.

With our last child and only son departing for college, an era was ending; a new one beginning; our family is raised — we're back to two toothbrushes again.

It's enough to make a grown man weep, but men don't cry.
And dogs don't bark,

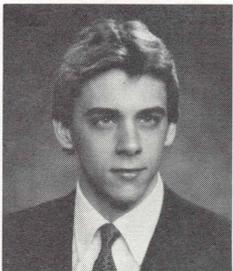

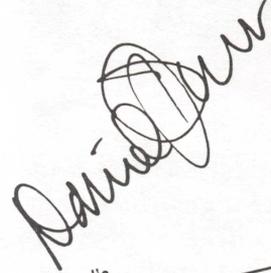

Birds don't fly,

Bees don't sting,

The sun doesn't rise —

And it doesn't rain in Indianapolis in the summertime.

You're not going to believe this, but I think it's raining in Indianapolis.

PASTOR LAUDS SUMMER INTERN

Dr. Braddy congratulates Paul on a job "well done."

Pastor Phillip W. Hyde of the Chelwood Park Foursquare Church in Albuquerque evidently thought enough of one of the College's summer interns that he took the initiative to write a letter to Professor of Pastoral Studies, Dr. Dwaine Braddy to tell him so.

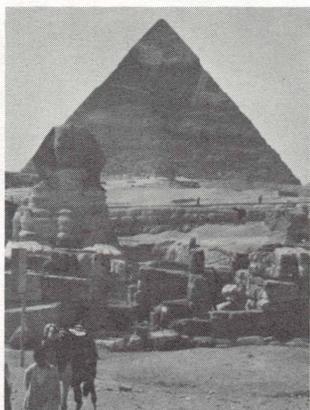

NC student Paul Atkins was one of nearly two dozen NC students who were "interning" in various work settings that nearly girdled the globe this past summer.

Pastor Hyde wrote, "He won the love and respect of the people of our church even though he was only here for three months. It is my belief that he is on the way to becoming one of the finest ministers you will have graduated from your school."

Obviously the internship program offers some returns other than learning experience and academic credit, it offers friendship and good will, something that can't be measured by academic credit, experience or money.

Internships and practical experience are emphasized at the college in connection with all of its major professional programs, but nowhere is it emphasized more than in the Pastoral Studies.

HOLY LAND TOUR '83

Like sentinels guarding the desert, these monuments on the edge of the Sahara Desert overlook the lush, green Nile Valley. Shown in this photo is the Chephren Pyramid, one of the famed Giza group which date back to the third millennium before Christ. This scene would have been seen by Abraham when he visited Egypt. It would have been familiar to Joseph, to Jacob and to the children of Israel during their sojourn into Egypt in the second millennium. It would have been seen by Mary and Joseph who escaped to Egypt during the Herodion purge of the infants in Bethlehem shortly after Christ was born there. It will be seen by our 1983 Flying Seminar party in March which will also visit Cairo via the Sinai Peninsula, and the Land of Goshen enroute from Israel to Cairo. For further information contact NW College Flying Seminar, P.O. Box 579, Kirkland, WA 98033. Tel. (206) 822-8266 Ext. 245.

PROFESSOR MINISTERS ON PASTORAL STAFF RELATIONS

NC Professors deal in more than theory and Ivory Towers. They deal with the real world of ministry. One such example is Dr. J. Melvyn Ming, who is qualified to speak on Pastoral Staff Relations, having served on the staff in several of the larger Assemblies of God churches.

Recently Dr. Ming was the featured speaker at the Northwest District Youth Ministers Retreat. The theme of the retreat and topic of Professor Ming's session was "Pastoral Staff Relations."

Forty-seven associates attended the retreat. many of the participants were N.C. graduates.

MINISTRY TEAMS COMPLETE SUMMER TOURS

The Northwesterners help Day Spring unpack after tour.

On June 13th, four summer ministry teams began a very active itinerary representing NC in the northwest region. The teams were: Day Spring, The Northwesterners, Praisong, and Promise.

For the next twelve weeks these fourteen young people traveled a total of 34,684 miles, ministering in 110 churches and 32 camps. Nearly 25,000 people had the privilege of enjoying their ministry throughout Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, and Alaska.

Reports continue to come in stating what a great blessing these students were to young and old as they ministered. The impact and effect the summer of 82 tour had on these teams will be remembered for a long time. It has been a life changing summer of ministry.
