There is the amusing story of the clock that decided to quit when it found it would have to tick 31,536,000 times a year. It was too big a job.

But when a clever salesman told the clock it would only have to tick once a second, well the clock figured that wasn't so bad, and so has been ticking on and on ever since.

Don't look at the big job, but tear it down and look at it in "little jobs." The big job then seems easier.

-- Elmer Wheeler
