HERITAGE WEEK

Chapel services on February 28 - March 3 have been set aside as a "Heritage Week" series. Four special chapels have been planned to give us an opportunity to reflect on our Pentecostal/Assemblies of God heritage and look ahead with prayerful anticipation to what the Lord will be doing in the coming decade.

Rev. Donald Fee, faculty emeritus of Northwest College, will speak in chapel on Tuesday. Prof. Edith Blumhofer, an Assemblies of God historian teaching at Wheaton College, will be with us in chapel on Friday and in some classes on Thursday and Friday. Our general Superintendent of the Assemblies of God, Rev. G. Raymond Carlson, will be the featured chapel speaker on Thursday. In the Wednesday chapel we will emphasize the Assemblies of God theme for the 1990's, the "Decade of Harvest."

Throughout the week we will be following the Assemblies of God 75th Anniversary theme, "Review! Rejoice! Renew!" Let us celebrate together with grateful hearts to God for what He has accomplished these past 75 years in our fellowship.

Please note: Please take time to read some of the following historical highlights of our 75 years of Assemblies of God history.

HISTORICAL EXCERPTS FROM THE ASSEMBLIES OF GOD 75TH ANNIVERSARY EXHIBIT GUIDE

The Assemblies of God is celebrating its 75th anniversary in 1989. From a few hundred delegates at the April 1914 founding convention in Hot Springs, Arkansas, the Fellowship has grown to be the largest Pentecostal denomination in the world. During this celebration, we have opportunity not only to reflect on the heritage and history of the church, but also to recommit ourselves to the mission and aims of the founding fathers. A time line has been created to help unfold the story of the Assemblies of God from the roots of its beginnings through the Decade of Harvest, the 1990's. The time line is divided into four major sections: In the Beginning (1920-1928), Shaping the Church Amid the Storms (1929-1949), Expanding Horizons (1950-1967), New Visions for Evangelism (1968-2000).

IN THE BEGINNING - 1900-1928

Although there were isolated reports of people experiencing Spirit baptism in various parts of the country, the Topeka, Kansas revival in early 1901 marked the birth of the Pentecostal movement.

Charles F. Parham opened an informal Bible School for Christian workers in October, 1900, in an elaborate, unfinished mansion. The first of a dozen and a half students to receive the baptism in the Holy Spirit Parham's school, accompanied by "the initial, physical evidence," was Miss Agnes N. Ozman. The revival was on.

Parham began conducting meetings throughout Missouri and Kansas. Following a summer crusade Parham made Houston his headquarters and opened a "faith" Bible school. A black Holiness preacher, W.J. Seymour, who was one of the students in Parham's Houston school, became in the providence of God the link between the Parham phase of the revival at Houston, and Azusa Street, Los Angeles.

Seymour held meetings first in a private home (where he received his own Spirit baptism) and then to a large vacant building on Azusa Street. As reports of continuing revival at Azusa Street spread around the country and to foreign missions stations, seekers began to come from many places. And some of them returned to their homes as evangelists of the new movement.

By 1913 the Pentecostals had been driven outside the framework of traditional, organized American Christianity. But there was a need for stabilization among the independent Pentecostals. The call for order came from southern Pentecostals led by E.N. Bell. As Bell came to the Hot Springs Council in 1914, he was the pastor of 250 adherents in Malvern, Arkansas, and editor of the influential Word and Witness. He was the man who, in the early years, helped the movement as a whole to understand the principles of the Assemblies of God and became chairman for this first General Council and J. Roswell Flower was elected as secretary. It was clear that these Pentecostal believers did not desire to start a church. The convention was a happy medium between the two extremes of strict denominationalism and independent Pentecostal churches with no cooperation of missions or theological unity.

The sole departure from absolute congregationalism occurred when a resolution was passed authorizing the appointment of twelve representative men "to act in all necessary matters on behalf of this General Council..." The sovereignty of the local assembly was and still is inviolate. The combination of individual liberty and "Bible order" has stood the test for 75 years, ample proof that the pioneers in the first General Council wrought in God.

The new fellowship set up headquarters and printing operations first in Findlay, Ohio, then St. Louis, Missouri and 1918 they settled in Springfield, Missouri where they remain presently. Among the aims of the Hot Springs was the organizing of the Pentecostal missionary efforts. Bell and Flower handled the missionary funds, forwarding all the moneys to appropriate missionaries. The "Missionary Department was established in 1925. Noel Perkin came to Springfield in 1926 to assist in the department. In 1927 he was appointed Missionary Secretary, a post he filled until his retirement in 1959.

The Hot Springs General Council did not adopt a statement of faith. A committee was appointed by Chairman Welch to prepare a statement of fundamentals truths, and to present it to the floor of the 1916 council in St. Louis. The directive to prepare such a statement was the result of a "new issue" controversy which developed during 1913. Proponents of a "new issue" called "Jesus Only" Pentecostals became fascinated with a "revelation" that exalted the name of Jesus. This challenged the life of the young Fellowship. The Fourth General Council October 1916, met in St. Louis and drafted a Statement of Fundamental Truths that defined for its constituency the accepted doctrines of the Assemblies of God. The basic ingredients of stable organization had been hammered out.

SUMMER SCIENCE AT NORTHWEST COLLEGE

WHAT: Topics in Field Ecology. We live in an ecologically diverse and beautiful area. This course (or courses, as we will explain later) will be a combination of readings, discussions and research all centered around ecological topics. The offerings are as follows:

Topics in Field Ecology, 4 credits, including lab experience. May 8th - 26th. This three week course will cover local Puget Sound issues, rain forest ecology, nuclear power plant ecology, and the volcano ecology of Mt. Saint Helens. We will make the campus our base for the first week, traveling during the day to local sites of interest. The second and third week will see us on campus Mondays and Fridays with weekends free. We will leave each Tuesday a.m. for travel and overnight visits, returning late Thursday evenings. Assignments will include readings, journal entries, discussion groups, and written assignments due at the beginning of fall semester. See the course descriptions below to find out more of what we are going to see.

It is also possible to take any one of the three weeks as a stand alone course. You may take one or all of these but must take all three weeks if you are wanting to meet the lab requirement. The typical format of the two credit classes is participation in the activities and assignments of the week(s), and then to write a 5000 word research paper due at the beginning of fall semester.

Local Issues in Ecology, 2 credits. Meets May 8th - 12th. Sessions are essentially all day as we will be travelling each day to a site of interest. We will study Puget Sound ecology, trash and recycling activities, waste water management, fresh water management, and air pollution management in the Seattle area.

Volcano Ecology and the Implications to Nuclear Power, 2 credits. Meets May 15th - 19th. We will meet Monday on campus from 8-12 in order to get ready for the week. Early Tuesday we will head for the Trojan nuclear plant. Tuesday evening we will journey back close to Mt. Saint Helens, spending two full days in study, returning to campus late Thursday evening. Friday morning will be for debriefing and clarifying assignments.

Rain Forest Ecology, 2 credits. Meets May 22nd - 26th. We will meet Monday from 8 - 12 for introduction to the week. Early Tuesday we will head for the Olympic rain forest. We will be staying overnight in the area both Tuesday and Wednesday nights and returning to campus late Thursday evening. Friday morning from 8-12 will be for debriefing and clarifying assignments.

COSTS: Regular tuition and $10 lab fee. Extra charges of $120 for the full three weeks, or $25 for the first week, $55 for the second week, or $55 for the third week will cover food and lodging costs while off campus. Student is responsible for their own clothing, bedding and personal effects. If weather permits, we will probably camp out so a good sleeping bag and field clothing is very important. Be prepared for weather while in the great outdoors!
